Our college has been constantly attempting not only to provide a mere formal education or just create a grade college but has been stressing to inculcate ethical values, values of life, social awareness for arising the feeling of national integration and social consciousness. We all teachers not only offer the victuals of knowledge and intelligence to students but also we offer love, affection and faith to them and we consistently try to uplift them to the highest apex of success and satisfaction. The college aims at the versatile development of the students through the ethical, intellectual, physical and cultural values.

Dear Colleagues,

It gives us an immense pleasure to invite and welcome you to participate in the One Day Multidisciplinary International e-Conference On "Physical and Human Dimensions of Environment, Climate Change and Sustainable Development" organized by Dept. of Geography and Internal Quality Assurance Cell of our College and your esteem presence is cordially solicited.

Global environmental change affects all societies and their environments at various spatial and temporal scales. The linking of natural ecosystems to social ones is of central importance for the analysis, mitigation of and adaptation to any action or issue related to sustainability and global change. When examining the human dimensions of environmental change, the study of ecosystem services illustrates the strong interlink ages existing between both socio-ecological systems and global change. Ecosystem services are inextricably linked to human well-being and play a central role in sustainable adaptation strategies. Environmental impact of global change can both add to social vulnerability and change resilience by altering the supply of ecosystem services and the trade-offs which can occur. It is when examining such phenomena that the importance and abilities of governance systems to shape change and responses are seen. Although many social scientists thus came to study the social determinants and consequences of environmental change, they were even more unprepared to incorporate global changes in the scope of their work. The problems of global warming and the rise in sea levels, in particular, were remote from social science concerns, occurring on temporal and spatial scales which their research paradigms did not contemplate. And unlike environmental issues in general, global change did not at first generate socio-political movements which commanded their attention. The early calls for social science involvement came from physical scientists who clearly saw that human activity was responsible for the acceleration of changes observed in world climate. It would be necessary to engage social scientists in these efforts if current trends were to be modified. The challenges of inter and multi-disciplinary research, always stretching the vision – and often the patience – of "normal" scientists, are considerably amplified when collaboration seeks to bridge the gap between natural and social science.
